

Two-horse power snow removal

Photos by Carol Dillow Phillips

In these photos taken on a ranch near Raton Pass, Bill Phillips harnesses up some help to clear snow after the most recent spring storm. "The snow was so wet and deep from the drifts that we had to use the Big O Tires draft horses, Ace and Dozer, to move the snow from the road to our ranch," said Bill's wife, Carol. Ace and Dozer each weigh 2,500 lbs. and received quite a workout clearing this snow from the road, Carol added.

Reps., locals take fight for TSNH to the Governor

reimbursement of Medicaid funds back to the nursing home will generate about $1million, that will go back to the Colorado State Veterans Nursing 505 Fund, of which TSNH became an unwilling participant back in 1999.

Denver-based veterans groups want TSNH out of the 505 Fund.

During the meeting, Montoya said he explained to Gov. Ritter, "That the Las Animas County Board of Commissioners asked if a possible backfill could come from severance tax dollars." Montoya added, "There is about $23 million in severance tax that is generated from Las Animas County and only about $400,000 is received back though direct distribution to Las Animas County. The intent of severance tax dollars are to go back to the counties that are being impacted through the extraction of minerals," Montoya said.

Commissioner Gary Hill has been adamant about how much in severance tax dollars Las Animas County creates. Giving some back to TSNH is a way of getting back some of those dollars and a way to sustain TSNH, Hill said.

Ritter was informed that the Las Animas County Board of Commissioners

(BOCC) has been working with Congressman John Salazar and his office to designate 20 beds for local veterans at TSNH to help generate revenue, which would put the home well over its 100-resident quota to make it a profitable entity.

"I think the governor was hearing some things today he did not know," Rep. McKinley told The Chronicle-News after the meeting. "I think that Chairman Montoya did a very good job. I think Rep. McFadyen did a good job presenting the case to keep it a state facility. I think that we can start looking at keeping it state-owned. This is a mess if the state tries to go through with a sale, no matter who the buyer might be. We've got title problems, pending legislation to stop the sale, and we've got the Colorado Department of Human Services doing some underhanded things I do not like. So if we can make the governor aware of some of these things, maybe we can save the Trinidad home and keep it state-owned," McKinley said.

Ritter was also given a copy of the 1955 deed to the home that states that if the home does not remain a state facility to care for the elderly, then the title and property revert back to Trinidad State Junior College.

Commissioner Jim Vigil was vocal about $200,000 that the state takes from TSNH annually for oversight of the home. Montoya also brought this fact up to Ritter during the meeting. Montoya made a strong point to the Governor that TSNH, Mt. San Rafael Hospital and Trinidad State Junior College are all dependent on one another, so it would be in the best interest of the state to continue to operate TSNH.

Sen. Udall extends his reach in New Mexico and the other field representatives cover their areas on a regular schedule. While keeping posted hours for citizens to come visit, they also make a point to meet with all the mayors and many other officials.

Rael-DeLay's territory covers San Miguel, Mora, Harding, Union, and Colfax counties – the entire north-eastern corner of the nation's fifth-largest state. In addition to Roy, Clayton, and Des Moines, her regular stops include Las Vegas, Cimarron, Raton, Wagon Mound, and Mora, among others. She drives her circuit alone in a Ford Fusion. Asked how she likes her job, Rael-DeLay said, "I love it!"

Sen. Udall's office maintains an e-mail list of constituents, e-mailing notices each time his representative is coming to the area. To register or otherwise contact the senator, his Web site is tomudall.senate.gov. The Santa Fe office is available by phone at (505) 988-6511.

Preliminary hearing set for Duran

aging his wife's property exceeding $20,000 on Feb. 9. After initially evading law enforcement, Duran was arrested on March 16.

Trinidad attorney Lee

Allen Hawke, who is representing Duran, said that he would ask for a bond reduction for Duran at the preliminary hearing, but was unsure if the court would be willing to consider the request at that time.

City, county 2009 crime stats reflect business-as-usual year

week by The Chronicle-News.

As usual, there were some mixed bag upsides and downsides to serious crime in the Trinidad area last year. The bottom line is the department made a total of 1,659 arrests in 2009 - 1,547 adults and 112 juveniles. Only one homicide was reported in 2009 in April, compared to three in 2008, including the November double homicide at the Hollywood Bar.

The number of reported burglaries has gone from 83 in 2007 to 65 in 2008 and back up to 78 in 2009. Another 20 in-progress burglaries were reported last year. But the total number was still 14 percent off the city's five-year average, Glorioso said.

And after a down year in 2008, the number of criminal mischief cases to vehicles, businesses and private and public properties reverted back to 2007 totals. Some 282 cases were reported in 2009, compared to 221 in 2008 and 279 in 2007. By far the largest number of cases, 151, was done to vehicles.

In the area of assaults, 80 were reported, but only seven were of the more serious aggravated kind. That was down from 32 in 2008. But sexual assaults were up to 15 last year, compared to six in 2008.

Here are some other TPD 2009 crime statistics to better indicate the types of crimes and their reported numbers.

■ The city had 2,182 traffic stops, including one high-profile case involving Baron, the department's drug-sniffing dog that led to a narcotics possession arrest.

■ 495 suspicious incidents were reported

■ The department did 1,962 follow-up investigations.

■ 390 in-person harassments and another 162 harassments by phone were reported.

■ The department performed 1,296 school checks.

■ Among city code violations, 614 calls were for junk accumulation in yards, etc.

■ 404 calls were for public drunkenness.

■ There was one fatal car accident in 2009, 102 hit-and-run accidents and 225 involving property damage.

■ 256 noise disturbance calls were reported and there were 373 disturbances in progress.

■ The city's Graffiti Task Force was out trying to wipe out the damage resulting from 41 calls of graffiti tagging on private and public properties in the city.

■ Only 4 juvenile curfew violations were recorded, but 35 juvenile run-aways took place.

■ Police were called to 165 fights in progress and to 363 (mostly business) alarms sounding off.

■ Fifteen suicide attempts were made in the city last year.

■ 659 extra residential patrols were granted.

In response to Mayor Jennie Garduno's question at Tuesday's council meeting, regarding looking at ways to change crime enforcement where activities in certain areas have risen substantially, Glorioso said those areas of increase were brought to the attention of his police officers. They, in turn, then patrol higher-crime areas where suspicious activities and cars have been reported and where more crimes have been occurring. Last year, Glorioso said the department focused more on speeders in residential neighborhoods, resulting in a lot more traffic citations being issued.

The department continues to maintain its mobile speed radar unit around town, more as a deterrent since only five speeding violation tickets were issued.

Glorioso also noted that having Baron on staff and the five security cameras in place most of last year was very much a deterrent to crime in those areas, especially now that most people are aware of the camera locations. He said there have been no recent arrests from Baron's sniffing activities.

County crime statistics pretty much reflected those in Trinidad at about half or less the occurrence rate. The city has roughly, but not quite two-thirds of the county's total population.

For example, 43 accidents with injuries were reported and another 42 with property damage involved. The county had three fatal traffic accidents last year among 1,754 total traffic stops.

Following are more county crime statistics:

■ 29 cold and 4 in-progress burglaries were reported.

■ The number of in-person and phone harassments was 71.

■ Some 26 fires were reported in the county.

■ 14 frauds were reported.

■ The department assisted in 48 medical calls and did 593 inmate transports.

■ 24 criminal mischiefs to cars and businesses were reported.
